PATENTS

"If you have invented any new and useful thing, process, method or chemical composition, or have re-designed the appearance of any article, you can, on proper application within the specified time, obtain a Government Patent upon it as a reward for making it publicly available.

"With a skillfully obtained Patent of Invention, others can be prevented from copying your invention, either as made, or the basically new idea in any form for seventeen years, whether for their personal use or for sale.

"During that time you may sell or license your Patent for your exclusive profit."

TRADEMARKS

"Trademarks are adopted by those who have goods to sell so that buyers can recognize, choose, and demand their products by the name or design of the trademark, in preference to others.

"Carefully chosen Trademarks may thus increase the value of your business greatly. But many trademarks will not be upheld by the Courts as the exclusive property of the user, even though registered, and that sometimes ruins a business.

"So let trademark specialists advise you—help you select enforceable marks: And not after you have invested money in a trademark; but before you adopt one!"
