A Hint to Telephone Users

(With acknowledgements to "THE CANADIAN TELEPHONE JOURNAL")

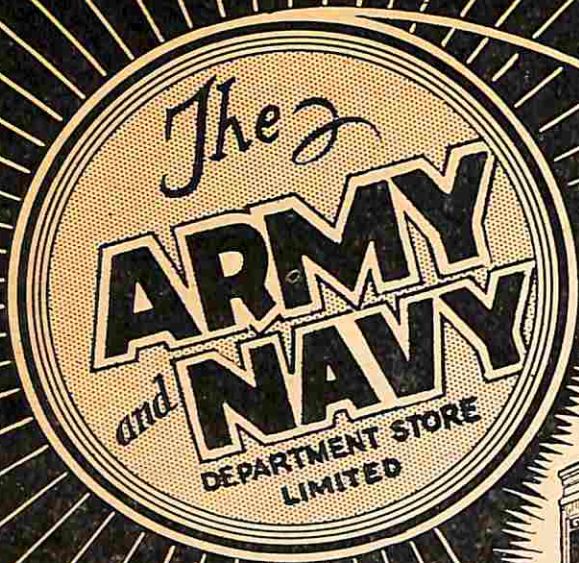

THE HOUSE THAT JACK BUILT

These are the steps, all dark and steep
That Jill must climb to go to sleep.
And this is the bedroom telephone
That keeps Jill safe when she's all alone.
It lessens a housewife's many cares
And saves Jill's time in climbing stairs.

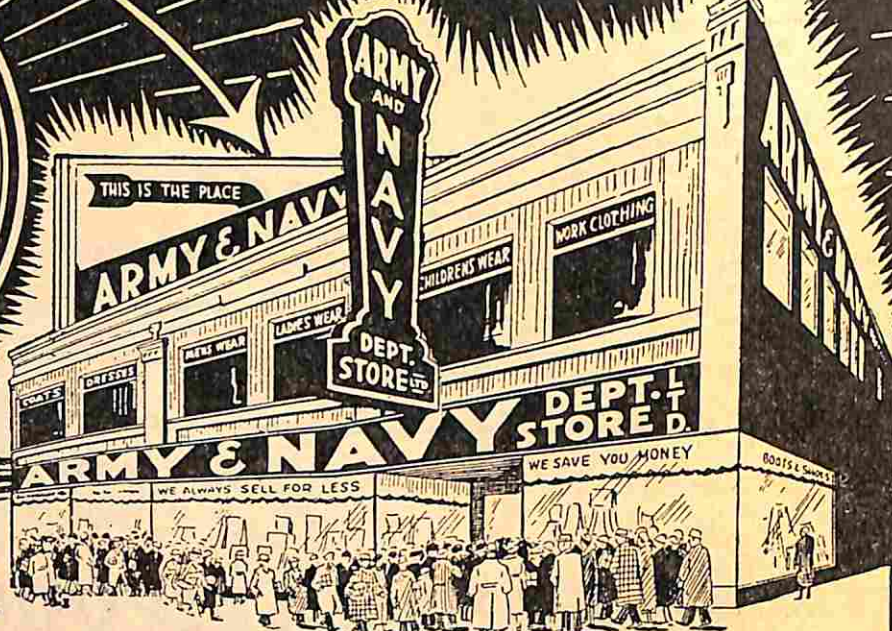

This is the kitchen, warm and bright
And in it a telephone, placed just right
Beside the stove that Jill may make
And answer calls when cooking a steak,
Its cost, says Jill, is not so much.
And order food from grocers and such,

This phone in the recreation room
Spells "walking-to-talking's" final doom.
And thus in the house where Jack abides
Extensions are found upon all sides.
And the lesson to learn, if you like to talk
Is "the more extensions, the less you'll walk!"
